Definition of Allocable Capital

Rio de Janeiro, May 6, 2026 - AXIA Energia S.A. (“Company” or “AXIA Energia”) informs that, on this date, its Board of Directors approved the allocation of up to BRL 4 billion for the purpose of redeeming Class “C” preferred shares (“PNC”) throughout the 2026 fiscal year. The decision is aligned with the Company’s capital allocation methodology, reinforcing its commitment to financial discipline, shareholder value creation, and investment capacity, as previously disclosed.

The Company clarifies that the approved amount constitutes a budgetary estimate and does not represent an obligation, commitment, or guarantee that the redemption of PNC shares will be carried out or that the approved amount will be fully utilized during the 2026 fiscal year. Accordingly, neither the amounts nor the redemption schedule for 2026 have been approved. Therefore, the resolution does not constitute an effective declaration of approval for the redemption of PNC shares, which will remain subject to specific approval by the Board of Directors, in accordance with the Company’s bylaws and applicable regulations.

The Company also informs that it has been in contact with B3 S.A. – Brasil, Bolsa, Balcão to define the appropriate operational procedures and timelines for the implementation of the redemption and/or conversion of the PNC shares.

Once these procedures and timelines have been defined, the Company intends to submit the relevant matters, at the appropriate time, for resolution by its Board of Directors, at which point it will disclose specific communications to the market regarding the commencement of the redemption process and/or the conversion of the PNC shares. Additionally, as this is a pioneering transaction in the market, the Company clarifies that the first conversion and/or compulsory redemption of PNC shares is not expected to encompass the full amount allocated for the fiscal year.
